

FALL IN LOVE WITH FEEDBACK

FEBRUARY 13, 2018 | THE WESLEY SCHOOL

Fall in love with feedback! The art of feedback remains an elusive challenge for many leaders in education. In this one-day workshop we will practice giving and receiving feedback by applying communication strategies inspired by Marshall Rosenberg's Non-Violent Communication Model. Participants will also learn about the ratio of positive to constructive feedback and its effect on teams, reflect on the relationship between feedback and courageous leadership, review the performance management model, and understand how to apply feedback to support the development of other educators.

At the end of this session participants will be able to:

- Effectively provide and receive feedback in a variety of scenarios
- Articulate the importance of feedback as it relates to an individual's growth
- Understand how to facilitate positive cultures of feedback
- Apply the performance management model to support employee development
- Articulate the importance of feedback as it relates to an individual's growth
- Assess their relationship to courageous leadership
- Identify objective vs. evaluative language
- Appreciate how the nuances of language impact professional relationships

Visit feedback_catdc2018.eventbrite.com to REGISTER!

FACILITATORS

KATE SHEPPARD, has expertise in coaching and developing staff, program innovation, program management and evaluation, community development, membership and customer service, volunteer development, qualitative assessment, strategic planning, goal setting, diversity and inclusion practices, time management, and leading organizational change teams.

JANE CHANDLER, is a Licensed Marriage and Family Therapist in the state of California. She currently supervises over seventy licensed clinicians across multiple counties. Jane specializes in acute care for youth in the juvenile justice system and understands the nuances of working within complex systems to facilitate safe and healing environments.

QUESTIONS? Contact us at info@catdc.org